Sale of the former headquarters of the National Bank

Built to plans by Charles Thirion, a major figure in Verviers architecture in the 19th and 20th centuries, the former Verviers National Bank is a remarkable testament to the city's heritage.

With its refined architecture, monumental style and high-quality materials, the building embodies Thirion's expertise in serving the major financial institutions of his time. Located opposite to Verviers-Palais railway station and close to the city centre, the building enjoys optimal accessibility and a strategic location.

Today, this characterful building offers great potential for redevelopment.
